

Why a hybrid institute?

Summer is the perfect time to focus not only on what's important to you as a professional, but what's important to you, personally. The summer institute gives teachers a chance to explore our lives through the written word. By becoming writers ourselves, we in turn can help our students to develop a rich, writing life.

Buzzards Bay Writing Project follows the National Writing Project's philosophy that the best professional development happens with "teachers teaching teachers." You are the professional and your voice will be heard.

The Institute schedule honors your time and allows for the relaxation and recharging necessary before the next school year begins. The combination of online work, done when your schedule permits, and evening in-person work, which allows collaboration with other teachers, allows a flexible summer schedule.

Writing to Learn and Learning to Write is the Institute focus. Participants will write daily and meet with response groups to share personal and professional pieces in various genres. Research, related readings and discussions will help participants identify and develop practices relevant to their own classroom practice. Time to learn and share strategies for writing will be offered as well.

Participant-led demonstration lessons, guest speakers, field trips, and support for your personal and professional writing are just part of what makes the Invitational Summer Institute one of the richest and most highly-regarded experiences for teachers in the South Coast area.

Writing in its many forms is the signature means of communication in the 21st century. The NWP envisions a future where every person is an accomplished writer, engaged learner, and active participant in a digital, interconnected world.
