

ROCK COUNTY WRITING PROJECT ²⁰¹⁷

What?

Join our Yearlong Institute! Spend two weeks of your summer immersed in writing and reading, and begin the exploration of a self-selected aspect of your teaching of writing. We will then continue to meet throughout the academic year as we support one another as we plan, implement, and evaluate the effectiveness of our inquiry into our teaching.

Rock County Writing Project: Yearlong Institute

Do you believe . . .

We write to learn?

It is important to teach rather than assign writing?

Your own growth as a writer would enhance your teaching of writing?

You can grow as a professional educator by exploring your own instruction in a safe and supportive environment with other committed educators doing the same?

If you answered yes, then the Greater Madison Writing Project (GMWP) is the perfect place for you. The GMWP brings together select groups of outstanding teachers who work with students in all academic content areas and at all grade levels, kindergarten through college. As a community of learners we immerse ourselves in reading and deep discussions about the craft and teaching of writing; we investigate and share our successful teaching practices, as well as our struggles; and we engage in the writing process ourselves.

Now, imagine yourself . . .

Joining a nationally-acclaimed professional learning community that puts teachers' knowledge, experience, and voices at its center;

Rediscovering the power of your own writing and scholarly inquiry;

Developing the skills and confidence to take your writing instruction into the digital age;

Having the support, resources, and opportunities you need to have the career of your dreams.
